The MOOC

The online version of the mooc has been shared.

- The design, tree structure and user approach (UX design) have been validated
The English version still needs to be technically improved, as it requires you to click on the English flag on every page to get it in the language of your choice.
- The content of the mooc has been revised
-the inclusion module will be transformed into a general information module rather than a specific module

-National inclusion policies (France and Cyprus) are always based on a specific profile (e.g. inclusion and disability, inclusion and migration, etc.).

As these variations correspond to the themes of the other modules, it has been decided to remove these 2 national tabs.

-In the inclusion section, only the following content will appear:

- a) the essentials (definitions of concepts, historical approach, etc.)
- b) UN social inclusion
- c) European inclusion policy

-Human rights have been added as a specific page. To access it, learners must click on the "find out more" button at the bottom of the inclusion section.

-The module exercises are created via H5P. However, Aux couleurs du DEBA uses a specific plugin for this. To date, the files built on <https://app.lumi.education/> by Stando and shared do not have the same integration into the site. You have to write a text and then add the access link.

Conversely, with the integrated plugin, the exercises appear directly on the screen.

This technical detail will be studied to facilitate the user approach.

- A page of content adapted in FALC (easy to read) will be created. Its tree structure will be simplified: videos and exercises will be accessible.
To access it, learners can click on the dedicated link, visible via an icon at the top of the page and below the header.
- The videos presenting the mooc, the modules and the module themes will only be created at the end when all the content has been completed.
